Religion in Global Perspective:
Religion and Sexuality
Spring 2016
Religious Studies 101 / Jewish Studies 231

Instructor:
Professor Jordan D. Rosenblum
Office: 1404 Sterling Hall
Office Hours: Monday/Wednesday 1:00-2:00 pm; and by appointment
E-mail: jrosenblum@wisc.edu

Course Hours:
Monday and Wednesday 11:00-11:50 am

Prerequisite(s):
This course assumes no prior knowledge of religion, sexuality, and/or gender.

Course Description:
This course examines “what religion is” by investigating how religious traditions imagine, interrogate, and regulate sexuality. Mapping out the contours of this inquiry requires exploration of related topics such as gender, embodiment, and historical (re)constructions. We will focus on the religions of the Ancient Mediterranean (especially that of Greeks, Romans, Rabbinic Jews, and early Christians).

Course Goals:
Our goals in this course mirror the four general learning outcomes for the Religious Studies curriculum, major, and certificate. To wit:

Our desired outcomes for students focus on proficiency in:
1) Close reading, interpretation, and written and oral analysis
2) Accessing, appraising, and utilizing a variety of resources and methods for research across disciplinary lines
3) Categorizing, analyzing, and comparing diverse systems of value and belief in a variety of contexts
4) Global and local religious literacy; identifying, evaluating, and interpreting the interrelationships and impact of religious worldviews and communities in Wisconsin, the United States, and globally

Classroom Etiquette:
In both class and discussion sections, students are expected to arrive on time and should not engage in private conversations. Students wishing to use laptops must: (1) sit in the first three rows of class; and (2) refrain from using them for anything besides taking class notes. There is a one-strike policy for using laptops for anything else. Should any instructor observe you playing on the internet, etc., you will no longer be allowed to use your laptop in class for the remainder of the semester. There is no reason for a student to be talking or sending texts on a cellular phone during class time. This is distracting to both professor and students. Cellphones must be turned off and put away during class. Students whose behavior in class is disruptive can expect a significant reduction in their final grade.

Requirements and Grading:

(1) Regular class attendance of lectures and careful preparation of assigned texts are essential aspects of this course. Please bring the assigned texts to class each week. In grading papers and tests, I will be particularly concerned that you are learning the material and concepts that are taught in class sessions. While prior learning can augment the material and concepts learned in class, it is not a substitute for doing the work required for this course.

(2) Attendance and participation: 10%. Active involvement in class is highly important and includes attendance as well as participation in class discussion.

(A) You may receive extra credit for participation. In order to do so, you must attend a Religious Studies-sponsored event (for events, see: http://religiousstudies.lss.wisc.edu/?q=node/10); complete the extra credit form (found on our Learn@UW page); and submit it to the instructor within one week of attending the event. Students may do so up to twice this semester. Based on the quality of work, you may receive up to 2 points per assignment added to your final participation grade (total of 4 possible points for the semester).

(3) Two papers: 20% each; 40% total. Two short papers, no more than three typed, double-spaced pages are due by 12:00 pm on February 26 and April 15. For each paper, choose two primary texts assigned to be read on different class days. Using a secondary reading from yet another class day, place these three texts (two primary and one secondary) into conversation with each other. Your paper should have a clear thesis that indicates how these readings help elucidate the academic study of religion and sexuality.

N.B.: Students taking this course for Jewish Studies credit must compare primary sources related to Judaism in each of their papers.

(4) Take-Home Midterm: 25%. The take-home exam, due by 12:00 pm on March 14, will address the readings and class discussions up to that point.

(5) Take-Home Exam: 25%. The take-home exam, due by 12:25 pm on May 13, will be cumulative and will address issues covered in the readings and class discussions.

Students are expected to bring relevant texts to every class
