

Modern Jewish History: From 1492 to the Present Day

Fall 2016

Prof. Amos Bitzan

TuTh 1:00-2:15 PM in Education L196

Course Description

This course surveys the history of the Jewish people beginning with the aftermath of the mass conversion and expulsion of the Jews from Spain in 1492 and concluding in the present. Our goal will be to explain the causes of major changes in Jewish societies over the early and late modern periods. We will seek to understand the vicissitudes of the lives of Jewish individuals and of the Jews as a religious, ethnic, and national group as they encountered both unprecedented opportunity and catastrophe in this tumultuous era.

One question that will guide us is how this small, often-marginalized minority group weathered the storms of modernity living amidst societies once dominated by Christianity or Islam.

Topics include religious revival, Reform, Enlightenment, integration and discrimination, political antisemitism, Zionism, the Holocaust, and the State of Israel.

IMAGE: This drawing, which appeared on the front page of the Sunday supplement to Le Petit Journal (13 January 1895) with the caption, "The Traitor: The Degradation of Alfred Dreyfus," depicts the French Jewish artillery officer's public demotion after having been falsely convicted of treason on 5 January 1895. SOURCE: Bibliothèque nationale de France on Gallica. Was Dreyfus's fate symbolic of the Jewish experience as a stigmatized minority in the modern nation-state?

Three Requirements

Discussions

At the start of each class, I will appoint two of you to moderate a class discussion about two questions that you have prepared. The questions should help us think about the central argument or the most significant points made in the readings for that day. Moderators will be graded on their questions and ability to direct a productive discussion; discussants on their contributions. SKILLS: listening, preparing for debate through close reading, thinking on your feet.

Wikipedia Entry

For this project, you will write a brand-new Wikipedia entry on a topic related to our course or revise an existing entry. The project is cumulative and requires working through several intermediate stages. See the detailed breakdown of the project in the Schedule of Assignments chart (p. 4-5). SKILLS: communicating historical research to the public; writing from Wikipedia's neutral point of view; evaluating secondary sources; building expertise.

Analytic Paper

In this paper, you will examine how a work by a professional historian of your choice answers a question about modern Jewish history that you have selected. Your task will be to understand what this historian argues, how the scholar makes the case for their particular interpretation, and how their view differs from other historians' responses to the same question. SKILLS: extracting an interpretation from a historical work; analyzing a historian's use of evidence; gaining expertise about a Jewish history question of your choice.

Wikipedia Entry Rubric

I will evaluate your entry according to Wikipedia's criteria. Please carefully review the three articles below. I will not in any way evaluate you on whether your article contributions ultimately remain on Wikipedia. It is very common for content to change on Wikipedia for myriad reasons. I will use the page history to see your contributions prior to any changes.

1. Evaluating Wikipedia (pp. 5-6)
2. The Good Article
3. The Perfect Article

Evaluation of Outlines

I will evaluate these based on how deeply you have thought about the paper's argument and the Wikipedia entry's content

Writing and Revising

If you would like some help getting started writing or you really want to push your argumentation to the next level, make an appointment TODAY at the Writing Center or at our very own History Lab. Instructors there can help you get started with the writing process, even if you haven't begun an outline yet. They can also help you answer the following tough questions about your draft:

- Have I proven my argument? Do I have a discernible argument? Do I need to develop one?
- Are my main points clear?
- Is my draft effectively organized?
- Have I responded to the assignment?
- Is my style effective, and is it appropriate for my audience?

The History Lab

The History Lab is a resource center where experts (History PhD students) will assist you with your history papers. No matter your stage in the writing process— choosing a topic, conducting research, composing a thesis, outlining your argument, revising your drafts—the History Lab staff is here, along with your professors and teaching assistants, to help you sharpen your skills and become a more successful writer. Sign up for a one-on-one consultation online:

Goals of the History Major

The goal of the history major is to offer students the knowledge and skills they need to gain a critical perspective on the past. Students will learn to define important historical questions, analyze relevant evidence with rigor and creativity, and present convincing arguments and conclusions based on original research in a manner that contributes to academic and public discussions. In History, as in other humanistic disciplines, students will practice resourceful inquiry and careful reading. They will advance their writing and public speaking skills to engage historical and contemporary issues.

To ensure that students gain exposure to some of the great diversity of topics, methodologies, and philosophical concerns that inform the study of history, the department requires a combination of courses that offers breadth, depth, and variety of exposition. Through those courses, students should develop:

1. Broad acquaintance with several geographic areas of the world and with both the pre-modern and modern eras.
2. Familiarity with the range of sources and modes through which historical information can be found and expressed. Sources may include textual, oral, physical, and visual materials. The data within them may be qualitative or quantitative, and they may be available in printed, digital, or other formats. Modes of expression may include textbooks, monographs, scholarly articles, essays, literary works, or digital presentations.
3. In-depth understanding of a topic of their choice through original or creative research.
4. The ability to identify the skills developed in the history major and to articulate the applicability of those skills to a variety of endeavors and career paths beyond the professional practice of history.

Skills Developed in the History Major

DEFINE IMPORTANT HISTORICAL QUESTIONS

1. Pose a historical question and explain its academic and public implications.
2. Using appropriate research procedures and aids, find the secondary resources in history and other disciplines available to answer a historical question.
3. Evaluate the evidentiary and theoretical bases of pertinent historical conversations in order to highlight opportunities for further investigation.

COLLECT AND ANALYZE EVIDENCE

1. Identify the range and limitations of primary sources available to engage the historical problem under investigation.
2. Examine the context in which sources were created, search for chronological and other relationships among them, and assess the sources in light of that knowledge.
3. Employ and, if necessary, modify appropriate theoretical frameworks to examine sources and develop arguments.

PRESENT ORIGINAL CONCLUSIONS

1. Present original and coherent findings through clearly written, persuasive arguments and narratives.
2. Orally convey persuasive arguments, whether in formal presentations or informal discussions.
3. Use appropriate presentation formats and platforms to share information with academic and public audiences.

CONTRIBUTE TO ONGOING DISCUSSIONS

1. Extend insights from research to analysis of other historical problems.
2. Demonstrate the relevance of a historical perspective to contemporary issues.
3. Recognize, challenge, and avoid false analogies, overgeneralizations, anachronisms, and other logical fallacies.
