Professor Jordan D. Rosenblum
Office: Department of Hebrew and Semitic Studies, 1340 Van Hise Hall
Office Hours: TuTh 9:00-10:00 am and by appointment
E-mail: jrosenblum@wisc.edu

Course Hours:
Tuesday and Thursday 1:00-2:15 pm

Prerequisite(s):
This course assumes no prior knowledge of Hebrew and/or Judaism, but a love of food is highly recommended.

Course Description:
When considering the kosher laws, people often think of the prohibitions of pork, mixing milk and meat, and eating food not prepared under rabbinic supervision. However, only the pork prohibition is explicit in the Hebrew Bible. The other two are found only in rabbinic literature. Rabbinic Judaism greatly expands upon biblical legislation, innovating a wide array of food practices. Focusing on rabbinic texts, students will explore how and why these novel approaches to food come about. In doing so, students will see how food has been shaped by – and, in turn, shapes – rabbinic Judaism. In order to complete this perspective, the course includes an examination of the modern impact of early rabbinic decisions on food practices. Come hungry to learn!

Course Goals:
Through guided reading in the classroom and at home, students will learn how to read historical documents and to assess various theoretical and methodological approaches to the study of food and culture. Students will further develop these analytical skills through several writing assignments, both in class and take home. Finally, students will understand the literature and historical development of rabbinic Judaism.

Classroom Etiquette:
Students are expected to arrive on time and should not engage in private conversations during class. While laptops are allowed in class, students should use their computers for taking notes and not for surfing the web, sending e-mails, etc. There is no reason for students to be talking or sending texts on their cellular phones during class time. This is distracting to both professor and students. Students whose behavior in class is disruptive can expect a significant reduction in their final grade.
Requirements and Grading:
(1) Regular class attendance of lectures and careful preparation of assigned texts are considered essential aspects of this course. Please bring the assigned texts to class each week. For most class days, there is a text or group of texts highlighted for special consideration, which students are expected to have examined in detail prior to the class. On occasion, a short additional primary text may be assigned. In grading papers and tests, I will be particularly concerned that you are learning the material and concepts that are taught in class sessions. Prior learning of Jewish sources is not a substitute for doing the work required for this course.

(2) Attendance and participation: 10%. Active involvement in class is highly important and includes attendance as well as participation in class discussion.

(3) Two papers: 20% each; 40% total. Two short papers, no more than three typed, double-spaced pages, will be assigned on February 14 and March 30 and are due at the beginning of class on February 28 and April 24. No e-mail submissions will be accepted. For each 24-hour period that a paper is late, the student’s grade will be reduced by one full letter grade.

(4) Response Paper: 5%. Students are required to attend one Center for Jewish Studies (CJS) lecture during the semester (information available online at: http://jewishstudies.wisc.edu/lectures/) and to write a one-page response paper. The structure of the response paper is as follows: one paragraph summarizing the content and thesis of the lecture and one paragraph of your own critical assessment of the lecture. The response paper must be submitted in hard copy within one week of the lecture. Late papers will not be accepted.

(5) In-Class Midterm: 20%. There will be one midterm, given in class on March 15. It will address the readings and class discussions up to that point.

(6) Final Exam: 25%. The final exam, given on May 13 from 10:05 am – 12:05 pm, will be cumulative and will address issues covered in the readings and class discussions. Students must take the final exam at the scheduled time.

(7) You may sign up for honors credit, which can be a very productive way of exploring your own interests in relation to the topics of the course. If you do so, it is your responsibility to talk with the professor to arrange your honors work in the first two weeks of the semester.

Students are expected to bring relevant texts in hard copy to every class

Honor Code:
Students are expected to follow the University of Wisconsin-Madison Academic Honor Code. If students have any questions about this policy, please speak with the professor. More information on plagiarism can be found at: http://www.wisc.edu/writing/Handbook/QPA_plagiarism.html
Extension Policy:
Extensions on papers and exams will not be granted. For each 24-hour period that a paper is late, the student's grade will be reduced by one full letter grade.
